N Korea threatens to resume nuke development over sanctions

SEOUL, NOV 3/-/North Korea has warned it could revive a state policy aimed at strengthening its nuclear arsenal if the United States does not lift economic sanctions against the country. The statement released by the Foreign Ministry Friday evening came amid a sense of unease between Washington and Seoul over the use of sanctions and pressure to get the North to relinquish its nuclear program. The ministry said North Korea could bring back its 'pyongjin' policy of simultaneously advancing its nuclear force and economic development if the United States doesn't change its stance. The North came short of threatening to abandon the ongoing nuclear negotiations with the United States.

But it accused Washington of derailing commitments made by North Korean leader Kim Jong Un and President Donald Trump at their June summit in Singapore to work toward a nuclear-free Korean Peninsula, without describing how and when it would occur.

In an interview with Fox News' Sean Hannity on Friday, US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said he plans to talk next week with his North Korean counterpart, apparently referring to senior North Korean official Kim Yong Chol.

Pompeo did not provide the location and date for the meeting, which will likely be focused on persuading North Korea to take firmer steps toward denuclearisation and setting up a second summit between

Trump and Kim Jong Un. "A lot of work remains, but I'm confident that we will keep the economic pressure in place until such time as Chairman Kim fulfills the commitment he made to President Trump back in June in Singapore," Pompeo said.

The North Korean Foreign Ministry statement, released under the name of the director of the ministry's Institute for American Studies, said the "improvement of relations and sanctions is incompatible."

"The US thinks that its oft-repeated 'sanctions and pressure' leads to 'denuclearisation. We cannot help laughing at such a foolish idea," it said.

The ministry described the lifting of US-led sanctions as corresponding action to the North's "proactive and good-will measures," apparently referring to its unilateral propulsion of nuclear and intercontinental ballistic missile tests and closure of a nuclear testing ground.

It outlined a series of provocative nuclear and missile tests last year. Kim shifted to diplomacy when he met with Trump between three summits with South Korean President Moon Jae-in, who lobbied hard to revive nuclear diplomacy between Washington and Seoul.

However, the North has been playing hardball since the summit, insisting that sanctions should be lifted before any progress in nuclear talks, which fuelled doubts on whether Kim would ever deal away a nuclear program he may see as his strongest guarantee of survival.

Obama says sending troops to Mexican border is Trump's 'political stunt'

WASHINGTON, NOV 3/-/Former US president Barack Obama has termed as 'political stunt' his successor Donald Trump's move of sending troops to the Mexican border where thousands of 'improvised refugees' are waiting to enter America, saying this is not patriotism.

Currently, an estimated 5,000-7,000 people from three Latin American countries - El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala - are marching towards the US through Mexico. Trump has deployed more than 5,000 military personnel on the border to stop them from entering. "In 2018 suddenly, they are telling you that the biggest threat to America is some improvised refugees a thousand miles away on foot, got their babies with them. Broke, got no money. This is terrible. And that's not enough just to lie about it," Obama said at an election rally in Georgia. "Now they're sending our brave troops - who, by the way, by law cannot enforce laws on domestic soil - they're sending them down there for a political stunt when they could be with their families. The men and women of our military deserve better than that," he said.

Without naming, Obama slammed the policies of his successor President Donald Trump. "That's not patriotism," he said.

He said that there have been politicians who fudged on the truth and did not talk on the things they screwed up. "They made promises that turned out to be harder than expected. They pumped up all the good things they did and didn't talk about the things they screwed up. They tried to put a positive spin on things. That's all human nature by the way - it's not just politicians. All of you all do it a little bit," he said.

Obama accused the Republican party of talking about an issue prior to the election and forgetting it immediately after the polls. "What's interesting is after the election they don't talk about it anymore - I guess it's just get fixed. You never hear about it again. Remember in 2010 they said that Obamacare was setting up death panels to kill your grandma," he said.

In 2014, the Republicans said Ebola is coming to get the Americans. Right after the election suddenly they didn't talk about Ebola anymore, Obama said. "In 2016 - Hillary's emails - this is terrible. This is violating American national security. You know they didn't really believe it because if they did, they'd be concerned about our current president on his cell phones while the Chinese are listening and he's leaving the phone in his golf cart. I didn't even have a phone for eight years," Obama said.

Obama alleged that the ruling Republicans are trying to distract the Americans and urged the Americans not to get deceived. "Don't be bamboozled this time. Don't be hoodwinked. Because while they are trying to distract you with all the stuff, they're robbing you blind. They'll say, look over there. Then I'll give their tax cuts to their millionaire friends," he said.

"And then they'll let some big polluters poison our air and water. They will take your healthcare away while you're not looking. They are like one of those times when door salesman comes to your door and says he's going to sell you a security system and meanwhile his buddy is in the back stealing your stuff," Obama said.

Obama said that the democracy cannot work when people just make stuff up and there's no consequences. "Not only can democracy not function, societies can't function. Marriages can't function. Friendships can't function. Businesses can't function if when you say something it doesn't mean anything. That is the moment that we are in our country right now. And the only check on that kind of behaviour is you," he said asking people to go out and vote. (PTI)

Myanmar by-election rare local test for Suu Kyisay locals

YANGON, NOV 3/-/ Myanmar voters cast their ballots in a small but key by-election Saturday, a rare local test of support for embattled leader Aung San Suu Kyi's party more than halfway through her time in office.

Suu Kyi and the National League for Democracy (NLD) swept to power in 2015 in a landslide victory ending decades of military rule. But her tenure has been marred by a failure to speak up for Rohingya Muslims driven out of the country by the army and stumbling peace talks with insurgent groups in lawless border areas.

A mere 13 positions are in play in the country's second by-election since the national poll three years ago, but they are spread out across the country and include parliamentary and regional assembly seats. Some two-dozen parties are in the mix and 69 candidates
