NEW DELHI, AUGUST 12 /- The Supreme Court on Friday said that if any notification is issued by the Centre for sale of genetically modified food products in the market, one month time should be given for raising objections. A bench of Chief Justice J Khehar and Justice D Y Chandrachud said that provisions already exist in the Food Safety and Standards Act (FSS), 2006 in this regard and the notification can only be issued after appropriate regulations are put in place. It noted the submission of senior advocate Aji Sinha appearing for the Centre that the issue is under active consideration and it is only after regulations are passed by Parliament, that a notification can be issued. Taking the statement on record, the apex court disposed of the plea filed by environmental activist Vandana Shiva challenging the notification of 2007 with regard to selling of GM food products. Sinha said that without the regulations in place the notification cannot be enacted upon. The Centre said the Food Safety and Standards Act (FSS), 2006 provides for 30 days period for the notification to be implemented during which objections if any can be raised. (PTI)

India to add 7K mw N-power capacity: Goyal

MUMBAI, AUGUST 12 /- The Union government is looking at doubling the nuclear power generation capacity to about 14,000 MW, Union minister Piyush Goyal said on Saturday even as he ruled out its becoming the main source of energy for the country. At present, India generates about 6,800 MW of nuclear energy. "We have recently embarked on a plan to expand it by about 7,000 MW more and this will be through indigenously manufactured equipment. So, 10 units of 700 MW each we have proposed and we shall be investing in and we will start on that," the power and coal minister said at an event here. The Union Cabinet in May had already approved the setting up of 10 indigenous Pressurised Heavy Water Reactors (PHWRs) for nuclear power generation. "But, nuclear power will never become the main source of energy for India because it is very expensive. It has its own benefits. It is quite free of carbon, it does not pollute the environment and therefore, our government is encouraging it. We do need clean renewable sources of energy which is available 24 hours," Goyal said. He said solar energy can only be generated during the day time and wind energy can be generated only during windy hours. "Therefore, there is a need of a resource, which can be available 24 hours. Hydro is one such energy which we will promote and nuclear energy also we are promoting. But both these sources are still quite expensive," he added. Goyal further said, "We are dependent on foreign sources for Uranium. As you are aware, China is blocking our entry into the NSG (Nuclear Suppliers Group), so we have some challenges. But, we are confident we will make progress." In a veiled reference to Donald Trump's rejection of the Paris climate change agreement, Goyal said India does not agree with the US President's views on the issue. "There is an effort and attempt by some senior leadership to belittle the issue of climate change and try and say that it is not really a problem for the world. But, we in India don't believe so. For all of us Indians, we have always respected nature. We have always believed that the environment is an integral part of human existence," he added. (PTI)

SBI set to cut and run!

PARTHA ROY
In terms of the tenure of its pres since the role of State Bank of India (SBI) no less than Reserve Bank of India (RBI) and even bigger. In its early phase in the name of 'Imperial Bank' it took the bigger responsibility of country's banking operations. And today it's still the biggest public sector commercial bank of the country with a wider reach to people and the economy. But how long SBI will remain for any? It will be only for a specific class denying the responsibility of Public Sector Units (PSU). In country like India the role of PSUs to serve the diversified need of the finance mastership is beyond measure. Keeping this in mind the Industrial Policy Resolution (IPR), 1948 recognised the mixed economy set up of the country and since then PSUs are serving the nation and the people though in the post-liberalisation phase it has lagged behind a bit because of a number of reasons like poor performance, lack in apt policy regulations, frequent divestment measure etc. The need for best banking support in market-friendly framework or an irresponsible participation of the people. But sure the intention of the policy was to mainstream the marginalized. Meanwhile the government has changed its stance radically and in the name of tackling the black money menace and

86,000 unbanked villages under the banking network was farsighted and followed the Keynesian conclusion. The Modi government in its early period to add feather to the FIP launched the Jan Dhan Yojana (JDY) which finally didn't work well may be because of either the lack of the policy framework or an irresponsible participation of the people. But sure the intention of the policy was to mainstream the marginalized. Meanwhile the government has changed its stance radically and in the name of tackling the black money menace and the mounting problems of Non Performing Assets (NPAs) with banks it is trying some anti-democratic actions. The SBI merger with its associates, was the biggest hint and a landmark of a paradigm shift in the banking sector. Post merger SBI's measures like fixing minimum savings account balance, imposing higher charges transactions and other services has made it costly to a bigger mass. And lastly the 50 bps rate cut on savings bank accounts 0.5 per cent has unfolded the reality that it is moving away. Interestingly the rate kept at 4 per cent for the 'core' class but a symbolic loss for 'low-income' class. Is it really a pro-poor policy
